Gen. Taylor Called Out Of Retirement to Aid JFK; First Job: Berlin.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(UPI)—Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, scholarly, combat-wise former Army chief of staff, was called out of retirement today to be President Kennedy's adviser on intelligence and military developments.

Mr. Kennedy told the four-star former paratroop commander to report for work Saturday on his first assignment—reviewing United States planning in the Berlin crisis. The fifty-nine-year-old Taylor was United States commander in the Red-encircled city from September, 1959, to February, 1951.

In the wake of the Cuban invasion fiasco, Mr. Kennedy summoned Gen. Taylor from his post as president of the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts in New York City to investigate American guerrilla war and intelligence capabilities.

The White House said Gen. Taylor will be sort of a Presidential watchdog in the intelligence field. He will make sure the Central Intelligence Agency meets the government's future needs and work closely with the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board.

Press secretary Pierre Salinger said that in his new job, Gen. Taylor will not be interposed between Mr. Kennedy and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, National Security Council or Central Intelligence Agency.

No Command Authority.
Mr. Salinger said Gen. Taylor "will have no command authority but will have access to all information necessary for the discharge of his responsibilities to the President."

The announcement indicated Gen. Taylor would be given overseas assignments. The White House said he would be available to represent Mr. Kennedy when the President "makes senior military representation at home or abroad." The general will sit in front of the chair on meetings of the National Security Council.

In his new job, he will return to active military service and will keep his four-star rank. He retired June 30, 1955, after

John D. Rockefeller 3d chairman of Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, said yesterday that Edgar B. Young will continue to serve as acting president of the center until the board of directors can appoint a successor to Gen. Taylor. The next meeting of the board is scheduled for July 10.

Speaking for the directors, officers and staff of the center, Mr. Rockefeller expressed their appreciation of Gen. Taylor's "imaginative and effective leadership" since he assumed the president's post on Jan. 4. "While we sincerely regret that his service with the center could not have been longer," Mr. Rockefeller said, "our sense of loss is lessened by the knowledge that once again he will serve our country with honor and distinction."
